

Critical Acclaim For
P.O.V.'s "HIDING AND SEEKING:
FAITH AND TOLERANCE AFTER THE HOLOCAUST"

By Oren Rudavsky and Menachem Daum

"A courageous trip into the morass of post-Holocaust faith, tribalism and intolerance, and generational perspectives. . . . a heartfelt and rather brave film."

- Newsday

"Extraordinarily moving."

- New York Magazine

"Deeply moving... its examination of the long-lasting effects of evil on the psyche of its victims and their descendants is both thoughtful and much needed in these increasingly polarized times."

- The Hollywood Reporter

"Moving. . . starts with a question: 'How did some Jews who experienced the Holocaust maintain their faith in God?' What follows is that rarest of travel films, one that makes the gradual voyage of a soul toward enlightenment palpable."

- Village Voice

"One of the most deeply moving documentaries I've seen recently."

- Michael Wilmington, Chicago Tribune

"What's unique about this documentary . . . is that it grips history with both hands, shakes it, examines it, and exits with the entire wrinkled contents bravely in tow."

- Janice Page, The Boston Globe

"Ultimately, Hiding and Seeking is about finding the humanity in all people. This PBS-bound documentary lives up to that ambitious ideal."

- Paul Sherman, The Boston Herald

"A subtle and complex look at a father's quest for tolerance."

- Deborah Hornblow, Hartford Courant

"A touching documentary."

- George Robinson, The Jewish Week, New York

"[Menachem] Daum proves to be a rich subject for cinematic treatment. . . . With three generations of both Jews and Poles reunited, the film creates a dramatic opportunity for closure."

- Annette Insdorf, The Forward, New York

"Hiding and Seeking stands as an exceptional example of truth-telling and a luminous work of art. All TV watchers, Jewish and non-Jewish, should see it also as an important point of departure for their own quests for understanding."

- Jules Becker, The Jewish Advocate, Boston

"Deeply rewarding. . . . This valuable film is a natural for family viewing, with a lively discussion guaranteed to follow."

- Michael Fox, Detroit Jewish News

“Unexpectedly affecting. . . . even adult children have something to learn from their parents.
If only they would listen.”

- Cynthia Dettelbach, *Cleveland Jewish News

“Highly recommended. Profoundly moving. . . . This engrossing documentary provides much material for discussion. A significant examination of historical events and their legacy and a positive addition to library collections.”

- Educational Media Reviews Online

“Rest assured that in virtually no popular Cineplex will you find such intellectual, spiritual and emotional stimulation as what Hiding and Seeking can offer.”

- Cliff Vaughn, *EthicsDaily.com

“Hiding and Seeking is noteworthy for its daring exploration of the complex dynamics of survival and resistance, hatred, forgiveness and healing.”

- Macky Alston, *Cross Currents
