

Critical Acclaim For
P.O.V.'s "NO BIGGER THAN A MINUTE"
By Steven Delano

"[Steven] Delano's documentary is the first film about dwarfism to be broadcast on national TV made by someone who actually knows what life under 5 feet is all about. . . . Delano explores the role of little people in popular culture to find out what being a dwarf really means, to himself and to others of short stature."

— Marissa Levy, *USA TODAY

"Size matters. Bodies matter. But in No Bigger Than a Minute, character matters most."

— Lisa Kennedy, *Denver Post

"A fascinating P.O.V. special. . . . a compelling hour of warmth, humor and background about the world of little people."

— Dusty Saunders, *Rocky Mountain News

"Steven Delano has decided to take the reins from Hollywood and make his own film about little people."

— Robin Young, "Here & Now," NPR

"Filmmaker Steven Delano playfully considers his place in the world as a dwarf on No Bigger Than a Minute, on P.O.V."

— Roger Caitlin, *Hartford Courant

"While pretty people find things to hate about themselves, a PBS documentary by dwarf Steven Delano explores the challenges of being different."

— Molly Willow, *The Columbus Dispatch

"Stay up late to watch P.O.V.'s No Bigger Than a Minute."

— Birmingham News
